CHAIR: Nau mai hoki mai, welcome back, everybody, for this afternoon's hearing. I think this 8 afternoon we have Mr Hague; is that right? 9 MR HAGUE: Yes. Madam Chair. 10 CHAIR: Welcome to the Commission, Mr Hague. Would you like to introduce yourself then I'll 11 do the affirmation for the witness. 12 OPENING STATEMENT BY THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH 13 OF AOTEAROA NEW ZEALAND 14 MR HAGUE: Good afternoon, Madam Chair and Commissioners. My name is Matthew Hague 15 and I'm the counsel for the Presbyterian Church of Aotearoa New Zealand, which I'll refer 16 to as PCANZ from here on in. 17 I am a white male, 36 years old, medium build, with reddish brown hair. 18 I intend on keeping my opening remarks short, as will Reverend Wayne Matheson, 19 who I'll introduce shortly. In this way we want to allow the Commission to hear from and 20 ask questions of Wayne and in this way we believe we can best support the time and work 21 of the Commission. 22 At this stage I would like to, as has been done this morning, acknowledge the 23 survivors and their families and the acknowledge the impact and cost of both the abuse but 24 also the subsequent reporting process on them and their families. 25 I'd also like to offer survivors who wish to make a report to the Church about abuse, 26 perhaps prompted by what they hear and see today, to contact PCANZ about their 27 experiences or to make a complaint. There are various ways I could do this. One way 28 29 which I thought I could offer during my time now is our 0800 number, which is 0800244357. 30 I'd like to offer a brief description of PCANZ because it has a relatively unique 31 governance structure compared to some other denominations. It is decentralised compared 32 to some other churches within New Zealand. It is separated into different levels, starting at the top with the General Assembly, which sits biannually, down to the presbyteries of which there are seven, five regional, one Pacific Presbytery and Te Aka Puaho, which is formally known as the Māori synod, which I will talk about more today. And then underneath the presbyteries sit the local parishes.

But despite this seemingly hierarchical structure, the day-to-day operations of the Church are led by local parishes, supported by the presbyteries and supported by the National Office in which Wayne sits as Assembly Executive Officer.

The Book of Order is the, perhaps not foundational document of the Church, but it is our best reference and day-to-day document that we rely on and within the Book of Order it lists a range of other authorities, some theological, it lists the Treaty of Waitangi on multiple occasions throughout the Book of Order and there are other important, what I would call constitutional documents for the Presbyterian Church.

A chapter in the Book of Order is committed to Te Aka Puaho which, as I said, is the Māori Presbytery in the Presbyterian Church. The presbyteries, all seven of them fulfil a senior leadership role within the Church. Te Aka Puaho is unique in several respects but one being that they have a privilege of being able to appoint ministers to serve nationally whereas other presbyteries are only able to appoint ministers to be appointed to specific positions within specific churches.

The Assembly Executive role, which Reverend Matheson fills, is based in Wellington and is part of the National Office, and I would describe Wayne as perhaps the closest thing the Presbyterian Church has to a Chief Executive Officer. Wayne reports to the Council of Assembly and he is responsible for the day-to-day leadership of the National Office and the National Office supports presbyteries and parishes.

That concludes my opening remarks and I would hand over to Madam Chair perhaps to affirm Wayne.
